

George LodgeBattlefield Description

The noises are machine gunning ear splitting, bang. Shelling, and mortaring. The noise is terrific especially if you get them close. Real head bangers and, of course, the machine guns rattling and the smell of cordite, the whole place stinks of cordite. Now speaking of cordite when I first came home and every time it rained I smelt cordite if I was near a hedge. I could always smell the cordite because when it rained the cordite would settle and that went on for years me. I don't smell it now. I could then.
