

Stanley WoodWater in the Jungle

So we didn't get something to take with us, but in the jungle ultimately that was a major problem because unless you found any wells, and they might be poisoned anyhow. But if you got to a pond or a river you merely take a bucket or some containers, empty cans of what you'd been eating your rations out of. Somebody would take a vest off and you poured it through to get all the floating stuff in it, and then you'd boil it like mad for as long as you could and then you'd brew up. You would have a cup of char and what was left you'd probably have a shave if you hadn't had a shave for a couple of days or so. And that was how you went on.