Roll Call

Well we were all lined up, of course, and they start counting "eins, zwei, drei, vier, fünf", one lad would step out and go in the rear rank, you know, quick. And when they'd counted this first rank there was 40 men. And he'd count the back row and where there should have been 40 was 42 or something like that where there should have been 40. They used to swap over quick, and the Germans they gave that up I think counting, they couldn't count. They was one missing that shouldn't be missing but he was there
